What happens when his own brother Philip becomes a suspect in an investigation? Will he compromise on his ethics for his own blood? Review: "How do you know there won't be another murder?" asks a media person to police officer Derick Abraham (Mammootty). And he responds, "I am sure that my dad's name is Abraham." Debutant Shaji Padoor's Abrahaminte Santhathikal is a tale of two brothers of the same blood and character. Derick is a successful police officer who is the final word in every investigation. He handles even the toughest of cases that deal with tough criminals. When it comes to duty, no obstacle – be it relationships or sentiments - can stop him.Fast forward three years and we see another Derick - a drunkard who has lost all hope in life, shattered by the fact that his brother Philip (Anson Paul) refuses to meet him in the prison, saying he is no one to him. What went behind the arrest of Philip and why he hates his elder brother makes the movie.The film sees a Mammootty who acts his age. The scriptwriter Haneef Adeni has beautifully crafted a screenplay which not only has all the elements of Mammootty's recent films but has a fantastic story as well. The actor looks handsome and heroic as well, as an action hero who is capable of handling ten goons all by himself. At times he seems superhuman but he is like any other human being when it comes to his brother and we see a helpless and weak man inside the daredevil. Anson Paul too has presented a fantastic performance and shows us that one more promising actor is in the making.With an apt background score by Gopi Sunder, Haneef Adeni's script has been made into a brilliant film by Shaji. The punchlines, though rare, leave the audience applauding sans inhibitions. The cinematography by Alby needs a mention; every frame is beautiful, with light and shadow playing against each other. The stunt sequences, especially the car chasing sequence between Derick and Philip, are well choreographed.Every moment of this suspense thriller is gripping but if you expect another action film of Mammootty like Parole and Streetlight, you are in for a surprise. There is no superstar Mammootty here, but only Derick the police officer, and a caring brother. It looks like the scriptwriters have become intelligent enough to make the 'actor' in him the USP, without losing the beauty of their scripts.On the whole, Abrahaminte Santhathikal is a suspense-investigative thriller that evokes occasional goosebumps, laughter, sadness and two hours eleven minutes of suspense.
